Abstract

First sentence. Second sentence. Third sentence. Fourth sentence.

1 Introduction

Use the first sentence of the abstract to make a paragraph

Second paragraph is about what was done and what was found. (sentence 2,3 of abstract)

Third paragraph is about implications (final sentence)

Final paragraph about the remainder of the paper. Section something explains the data section something covers results. . . .

You can and should cross-reference sections and sub-sections. For instance, Section 2. R Markdown automatically makes the sections lower case and adds a dash to spaces to generate labels, for instance, Section 4.1. A

2 Data

Paragraph or two describing data broadly. We obtain our dataset from the City of Toronto open data Portal, using the `opendatatoronto` package (Gelfand 2020) and the statistical programming language R (R Core Team 2020)

Show an extract of the dataset with knitr and cable like how it is on the book (Table 1)

3 Results

4 Discussion

4.1 First discussion point

If my paper were 10 pages, then should be be at least 2.5 pages. The discussion is a chance to show off what you know and what you learnt from all this.

4.2 Second discussion point
